Born on another planet, Mat was sent to earth via a rocket ship by his parents who thought that their planet was about to be destroyed. Nothing actually happened, but this gave them much more living space in their apartment. Baby Mat safely landed in a cornfield, swaddled in a white cloth which later became his official guru gear. A young childless couple found Mat, but decided that a baby with a white beard and sunglasses was too much to deal with. Eventually a half Hindu, half Jewish couple adopted Mat and raised him as a Hinjew.

After studying with a wide variety of spiritual teachers, Mat had a profound enlightenment experience in 1987. A pigeon pooped on his head, bio-fueling a paradigm shift from his own little ego to the recognition of a universal presence much bigger than himself. Mat realized that he didn't have to be anybody. He just had to be and that spiritual growth could be fun, rather than overly serious.

Mat Zo's goal became to teach people to ask questions about the nature of reality, laugh a little, learn a little, and above all, to pay him in cash up front. Humor can soften what often seems to be the hard road of enlightenment and Mat has dedicated himself to helping others create bliss on Earth, relax and enjoy the game of reality!

In 2008 he put all of his spiritual philosophy into the book, The Rascal's Guide to Enlightenment, now available at dreamtreepress.com.
